Final Stand-up Set Title: "Modern Life Is Weird, Right?"

1. Opening (Relatable Observational Humor)

"You ever realize that we now apologize to AI more than we do to humans? I bumped into a chair yesterday and said, 'Sorry.' I think my Alexa felt left out."

"Online meetings are just a socially acceptable way to stare at your own face for 40 minutes and pretend you're interested in the charts. I learned more about my eyebrows than the quarterly sales."

2. Daily Life & Technology

"I told ChatGPT I was feeling sad. It replied: 'I'm here to help!' Meanwhile, my human friend left me on 'read'. AI is winning the empathy game!"

"Passwords now need to have uppercase, lowercase, a number, a symbol, a haiku, and the tears of your ancestors. And then it says: 'Password too weak.' Bro, it's stronger than me emotionally."

3. Social Media & Generational Gap

"Kids these days don't ask 'Can I go out?' — they ask 'Can I go viral?' My niece called me a 'boomer' for using Facebook. I'm 27."

"Instagram vs. Reality? My fridge has better lighting than I do. That's why I take my selfies next to the milk."

4. Family & Cultural Observations

"Indian parents have two moods: feeding you like a king or questioning your life choices like a disappointed HR manager."

"My mom can sense I'm sick from 4000 miles away, but can't find her phone while it's in her hand."

5. Closing (Call-back + Punchy Finish)

"We're living in the future, but the biggest innovation we all want is... a charger that doesn't die when you look at it wrong."

"Anyway, if this comedy thing doesn't work out, I'll just apologize to my AI. At least it listens. Thank you, and don't forget to feed your fridge light—it's a star!"
